City of Irving selects Informa Systems to manage all training needs

San Antonio, TX, March 2012 - The City of Irving, TX selected the InformaOne suite to manage the training needs to the Law Enforcement Officers within the city. Following the successful implementation with the Police Department, the City extended the system to cover all city employees. “The City of Irving has diverse training needs ranging from classroom learning to the delivery of online courses, all of which are covered by the InformaOne system as a single solution,” says Ann Konzal, senior sales consultant for Informa Systems.

InformaOne has been expanded from an online learning system to meet the classroom training needs of a large organization such as the City of Irving. “A city such as Irving will have a need for flexible and robust classroom scheduling features covering areas such as scheduling and wait lists“ says Mark Connolly, CTO of Informa Systems, “InformaOne meets that need.”

The overall strategy is to continually improve and develop the InformaOne e-Learning suite and give clients a single source for their e-Learning requirements. Organizations understand the necessity and benefits of a full array of training management functionality - including document, course, certification, records and retention management within a single platform. This unified approach yields much greater return on investment (ROI). InformaOne makes it possible to consolidate all documents and training records into a single and flexible online repository.
